

Decolonising Solidarity and White Privilege

22 November 2018, 4.30pm

Weenthunga Health Network invite you to a panel discussion to be held following our Annual General Meeting. Our three panellist will discuss how to best support Aboriginal peoples and tackle organisational white privilege.

Steff Armstrong is a proud Gamilaraay woman with strong links in Victoria. She is the Manager Programs with Weenthunga. She has 30 years of experience in education. She has worked as an Aboriginal education consultant, a teacher, and a Lecturer in Indigenous Education. She received the Rohan Nicks Russell Drysdale Fellowship in Indigenous Health and Welfare and the Indigenous Leadership Fellowship as an Emerging Leader.

Clare Land has been an active supporter of Aboriginal struggles since 1998. Clare has worked in both academic and community settings. She is a trained community practitioner and facilitator and a trainer in Courageous Conversations About Race. She has worked in community development. Clare works at Gary Foley's Koori History Archive and the Reichstein Foundation. Clare's learning about working in support of Aboriginal struggles is captured in her book, Decolonizing Solidarity: Dilemmas and Directions for Supporters of Indigenous Struggles.

John Bonnice has an extensive background in the community services sector having worked in a range of roles including casework practitioner, youth & community development, service coordination, program management and social policy development. John is currently employed at Anglicare Victoria (St Luke's Region) as manager of Communities for Children Bendigo project. John is co-chair of the Bendigo Reconciliation Committee.

Cost: Free for Weenthunga members and $20.00 for non-members (includes afternoon tea and AV streaming costs)

Venue: Level 13, 257 Collins Street, Melbourne and via Webcast

Registration:

Members - <https://www.trybooking.com/YYXH>

Non-members - <https://www.trybooking.com/YXSS>

Registrations close on 15 November 2018. For further information about bookings and Webcast details, please contact sarah@weenthunga.com.au.